1. Attached is a second letter from Subject to the Director in which he offers his advice on international affairs. It has not been translated because it is essentially the same as his previous letter, described in our first memorandum to you, dated 8 September 1960, copy attached.

2. Subject's attached letter to Khrushchev, dated 30 July 1960, is identical with that attached to his first letter to the Director.

3. With regard to whether a reply is necessary, we repeat our previous recommendation that Subject's letter need not be answered. He is a well-meaning amateur foreign affairs analyst, enjoying his self-appointed role as "advisor" to the great.

1. The writer of the attached letter states that he wrote about international affairs to the late Secretary Dulles, and to President Eisenhower on a number of occasions. He also claims to be in contact with the Rome Embassy and the Milan Consulate.

2. In his letter he deals superficially with world problems. He advocates a strong stand in opposition to Communism, which he defines as an ideological sham, maintained only by police methods in Iron Curtain countries. He believes Khrushchev is beginning to compromise with basic Leninist doctrine by now admitting some form of private enterprise. He suggests that President Eisenhower give Khrushchev a "real talking to" if and when the latter presents himself at the U.N. He makes some desultory and unclear references to the problem of German unification. He deals briefly and inexpertly with Italian political problems, proclaiming his faith in the forces of the right.

3. The writer also includes a copy of a letter he sent to Khrushchev on 30 July 1960 in which he admonishes Khrushchev for having been insincere and ruthless at the Summit Conference. He points out to the Russians that if they think that time is in their favor they are mistaken, because world problems are so grave that time will not diminish their seriousness. "It is useless to present Communism as divested of aggressive purposes", the writer tells Khrushchev, "if you continue to exercise violence in dominating the satellites".

5. The writer appears to be a well meaning, but dilettante and homespun foreign affairs analyst who enjoys his self-appointed role as "advisor" to prominent figures. No reply is necessary.
